Spaceway, is expecting to triple the turnover of its Storage And Consumables division (SAC) with the launch of a new e-commerce website.

Integrated interior space solutions company, Spaceway, is expecting to triple the turnover of its Storage And Consumables division (SAC) with the launch of a new e-commerce website. Attracting customers from throughout the UK that wish to purchase storage & warehouse equipment, In-vehicle, workshop, workshop containers or Assembly & Product Line Systems (APS), the website will be the first ever e-commerce catalogue dedicated to the complete range of Bott products.

Spaceway is supporting the new site by setting up a special department within its SAC division and will be undertaking an extensive advertising and marketing campaign in the national trade media. The company already has a large customer base for Bott and Storage Direct products in the South of England and anticipates that the new site will attract customers from all over the UK when it goes live this autumn.

Based in Cornwall, Bott has over 30 years experience of manufacturing workshop and storage products in the UK and are renowned for their value for money, quality products and fast, reliable service.

Commenting, Malcolm Jeary, Managing Director of Spaceway says: "SAC's new e-commerce site provides customers with a one-stop-shop for all their workshop and storage needs. The website is easy and quick to navigate with the special Quickship range being despatched within three working days".

Independent of any manufacturer and with access to literally thousands of sources, SAC specialises in the sourcing and supply of storage products and equipment consumables that are regularly required by all businesses.

Whether a company needs to obtain supplies for a high technology office environment, a large warehouse or a production floor, SAC will be able to provide a single source to solve the problem quickly, saving the company time and trouble of searching through the numerous catalogues in the marketplace.
