

Case Study

SELDEN MASTS

PROJECT

A full design and build refurbishment package following a relocation.

CLIENT

Selden Masts

DETAIL

When Selden Masts bought a competitor firm the opportunity arose to buy an office block next to the former firm's site.

Spaceway South completely refurbished the office accommodation, enabling the smooth relocation to the site of all 48 staff.

The four-month project involved the phased implementation of a refurbishment programme involving offices, stores and production areas. A specialist fork lift truck was provided to solve the unusual storage challenge presented by the manufacture of masts.

In addition to the racking systems, a mezzanine floor was provided for storage, office furniture was supplied, as was carpeting and 'Komfort' partitioning systems during the transformation of the office accommodation.

CLIENT FEEDBACK

"Our main priority from the outset was to ensure that our new market position was augmented by the full integration of both companies into a single entity."

"At the heart of this was ensuring that our premises were configured in a way which supported our drive for the best possible productivity - and in Spaceway we found a company with the resources to run the project from start to finish."

David Potter
Managing Director, Selden Masts

